MY INAUGURAL YEAR as Thunderbird's president has been extraordinary in many ways. The Thunderbird experience that defines our global community has also become my own. From Russia to Korea, from Prague to Glendale, I have had a truly global year. It is a constant reminder that Thunderbird is more than a place; it is an idea, a spirit, a curiosity about our world and a desire to make that world a better place.

The question, then, is where do we go from here? For starters, we shift our thinking from what has been done to what can be done.

In our six decades of existence we have built a reputation that has made us the recognized leader in international management education. In recent years, we have seen challenges to our leadership — a declining MBA market, increasing competition in our niche of international management, and global events that have created obstacles for international students' participation in our programs. Through dedication to our core mission and by relying on the talents of our extraordinary faculty and staff, we have resisted these challenges and maintained our number one ranking.

In fact, staying true to the mission of educating future global leaders and holding firm in the belief that "borders frequented by trade seldom need soldiers," we have ensured that Thunderbird remains a unique institution which offers a one-of-a-kind learning experience. This Truly Global Thunderbird spirit is described in this fall's Thunderbird Magazine as being embodied in "five pillars:" Global Thought Leadership, Enterprising Spirit, Business & Cultural Fusion, Borderless Community, and Global Citizenship. As we work to more firmly reposition Thunderbird around these core beliefs, we look to you for support.

A question I'm often asked is, "What can I do to help Thunderbird as we move forward?" Without a doubt, giving back is one of the most important things you can do to make a difference. Your generosity makes the School more competitive, ensures that we attract the most qualified students, and has a direct impact on our ability to brand and promote Thunderbird worldwide.

We publish the Investor Report each year to recognize the incredible philanthropic spirit of our global family of T-bird alumni and friends. In fiscal year 2005 (July 1, 2004 – June 30, 2005), nearly five thousand alumni and friends gave to Thunderbird. Gifts ranged from single-digit to six-figure, and each had a positive impact on the School's present and future.

Most importantly, each gift helped us move from what has been done to what can be done.

As you read through these pages, I invite you to consider your role in our shared future. If you want a Thunderbird that truly is the undisputed, most renowned school of international management in the world, we need your help to make it happen.

With your support, we can—and will—succeed.

Best wishes,

DR. ÁNGEL CABRERA
PRESIDENT

Thunderbird's honored faculty

Pillars of Strength

THEY ARE BUSINESS leaders who are effective across cultural boundaries. Generators and disseminators of new knowledge. Entrepreneurs. Experts at fusing business, culture and language. They're six of Thunderbird's top-performing faculty, recently honored as academic chairs and fellows, and appointed as directors of the School's Centers of Excellence.

"In an age where competition for faculty is fierce — with key educators often lured to institutions with larger endowments and stronger alumni donor bases — Thunderbird is fortunate to offer these appointments, made possible through generous endowed gifts to the School," says President Ángel Cabrera.

Such gifts provide additional incentives for research and conference opportunities, bolster classroom excellence, and in turn attract the world's best and brightest student minds to campus.

"It is an exciting time of change at Thunderbird," adds Cabrera. "And these faculty, who so perfectly embody Thunderbird's core values, will lead the way. Their commitment to the School's five brand pillars — Global Thought Leadership, Enterprising Spirit, Business & Cultural Fusion, Borderless Community and Global Citizenship — will be transformational."

Kannan Ramaswamy

(Professor of Global Strategy)

William D. Hacker Chair in Management

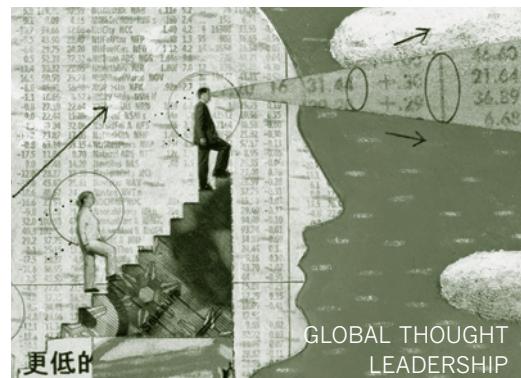

Corporate diversification, privatization, mergers & acquisitions, joint-ventures

If teaching and research awards came with trophies, Ramaswamy would have an office brimming with accolades — leaving barely enough room to enter.

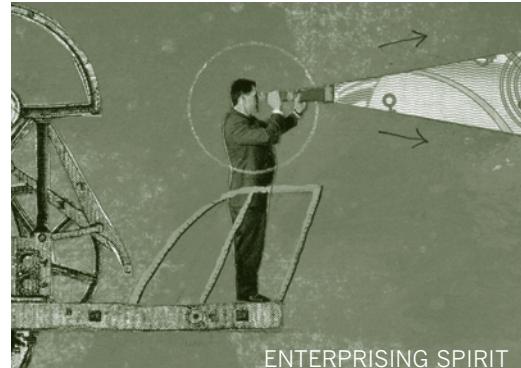

Voted Outstanding Professor by the Thunderbird student body eight times since 1999, Ramaswamy was named Thunderbird's William D. Hacker Chair in Management in June 2005.

"I am looking forward to making significant progress on a research project dealing with corporate strategy in emerging markets, while at the same time, wrapping up a series of cases on success stories from developing country businesses," he says.

Ramaswamy, who won Thunderbird's Most Outstanding Course award in 1998 for Strategic Management, says he is hopeful that the twin outputs of research and writing will carry forward into the classroom. "Given the increasing importance of emerging markets, it would be imperative to bring this material and focus to the coursework that we offer," he says.

Bill Youngdahl

(Associate Professor of Operations)

William D. Hacker Fellow in Production Management

Operations Management, Project Management

A self-proclaimed "recovering engineer," Youngdahl admits that he has a soft spot for the people side of global operations and project management.

He recently developed an MBA course, Managing Projects, that grew into an executive education offering in global project leadership for consumer healthcare and pharmaceutical corporation, Novartis. "One small step leads to large leaps if we can connect what we do within Thunderbird to the reality of business, then share that applied knowledge with even broader audiences," says Youngdahl, who is now co-writing a book about global project management with emeritus professor of International Studies, Robert Moran.

"I hope additional gifts to the school create new opportunities for fellowships and chairs," says Youngdahl. "This is a privilege that needs to be extended to more professors — some more deserving than I — and it could happen with more generous gifts to the school."

Andrew Inkpen

(Professor of Management)

J. Kenneth and Jeannette Seward Chair in Global Strategy

Global strategy, managing multinational firms, strategic alliances, M&A, organizational learning

If you want to know the specifics of the General Motors and Toyota alliance, Inkpen is your go-to guy.

He's examining the various aspects of international joint ventures and strategic alliance management between the two companies. "I have been interested in how firms acquire knowledge through international alliance participation," he says, having also studied a joint venture between the Singapore government and Suzhou municipality.

As the Seward Chair in Global Strategy, Inkpen hopes to branch out even further, examining global innovation practices in multinational corporations. He's interested in learning how multinationals take advantage of pockets of innovation excellence at the subsidiary level — how to locate those pockets of excellence and how to transfer that knowledge to the rest of the company.

Never idle, Inkpen serves on the editorial boards of seven journals and is simultaneously pioneering a new executive education program with Cisco Systems.

Mansour Javidan

Director, Garvin Center for the Cultures & Languages of International Management

Mansour Javidan has an open-door policy. In fact, he has an open campus policy, collaborating freely with Thunderbird colleagues and students as they work together to understand the global mindset that makes Thunderbird so unique.

One of his goals, as director of the Center, is to determine the best ways to satisfy the typical Thunderbird student's unique thirst for global understanding. He believes that students who come to Thunderbird are global explorers and come in search of a well-developed global mindset. "We decided to define global mindset, measure it and use our findings as input for the design of our courses and programs," he says. Curricular changes that incorporate his team's findings are expected to be implemented in fall 2006.

"By understanding scientifically how and why Thunderbird students are different than traditional MBA students, we can better target and attract the right people to the School."

Javidan, appointed in 2004, is also shepherding the curricular language changes that will again make proficiency in a second language mandatory for Thunderbird students in 2006.

Robert Hisrich

Garvin Professor of Global Entrepreneurship

Director, Center for Global Entrepreneurship

Hisrich has been described by his peers as "a real home run for Thunderbird," and someone who "will gladly spend time with anyone at any career stage who wants to talk about research and what's going on in the entrepreneurship field."

His task is not a small one. Appointed in July 2005, he's been charged with creating a world-class global entrepreneurship center — something he's eager to do. "Thunderbird offered a unique opportunity to combine my two passions: global and entrepreneurship," says Hisrich. "I love creating."

The shorter lifecycle of today's products, Hisrich says, creates a demand for entrepreneurial students globally — students who can work quickly, think outside the box and feel comfortable with change.

The student demand for entrepreneurial education and tools is also driving what Hisrich sees as an entrepreneurial boom over the next 20 years. "Students want real challenges right away," says Hisrich. "Instead of a long training program, they want to be a participant, to contribute, to be listened to. They want jobs with more meaning and lifestyle opportunities. That's the enterprising spirit."

And that's precisely what Hisrich plans to provide. "Our students can work on projects that global companies are interested in sponsoring," says Hisrich. Additionally, he hopes they will gain hands-on experience through a business incubator that is being considered. "The thought is that a student can come to Thunderbird with a great global idea, and we can help that student create a business."

Gregory Unruh

Director, Lincoln Center for Ethics

Founded in 2003 as the result of a generous contribution from philanthropists Joan and David Lincoln, the Lincoln Center supports its benefactors' belief that "good ethics is good business."

Unruh, appointed as the new director in September 2005, couldn't agree more.

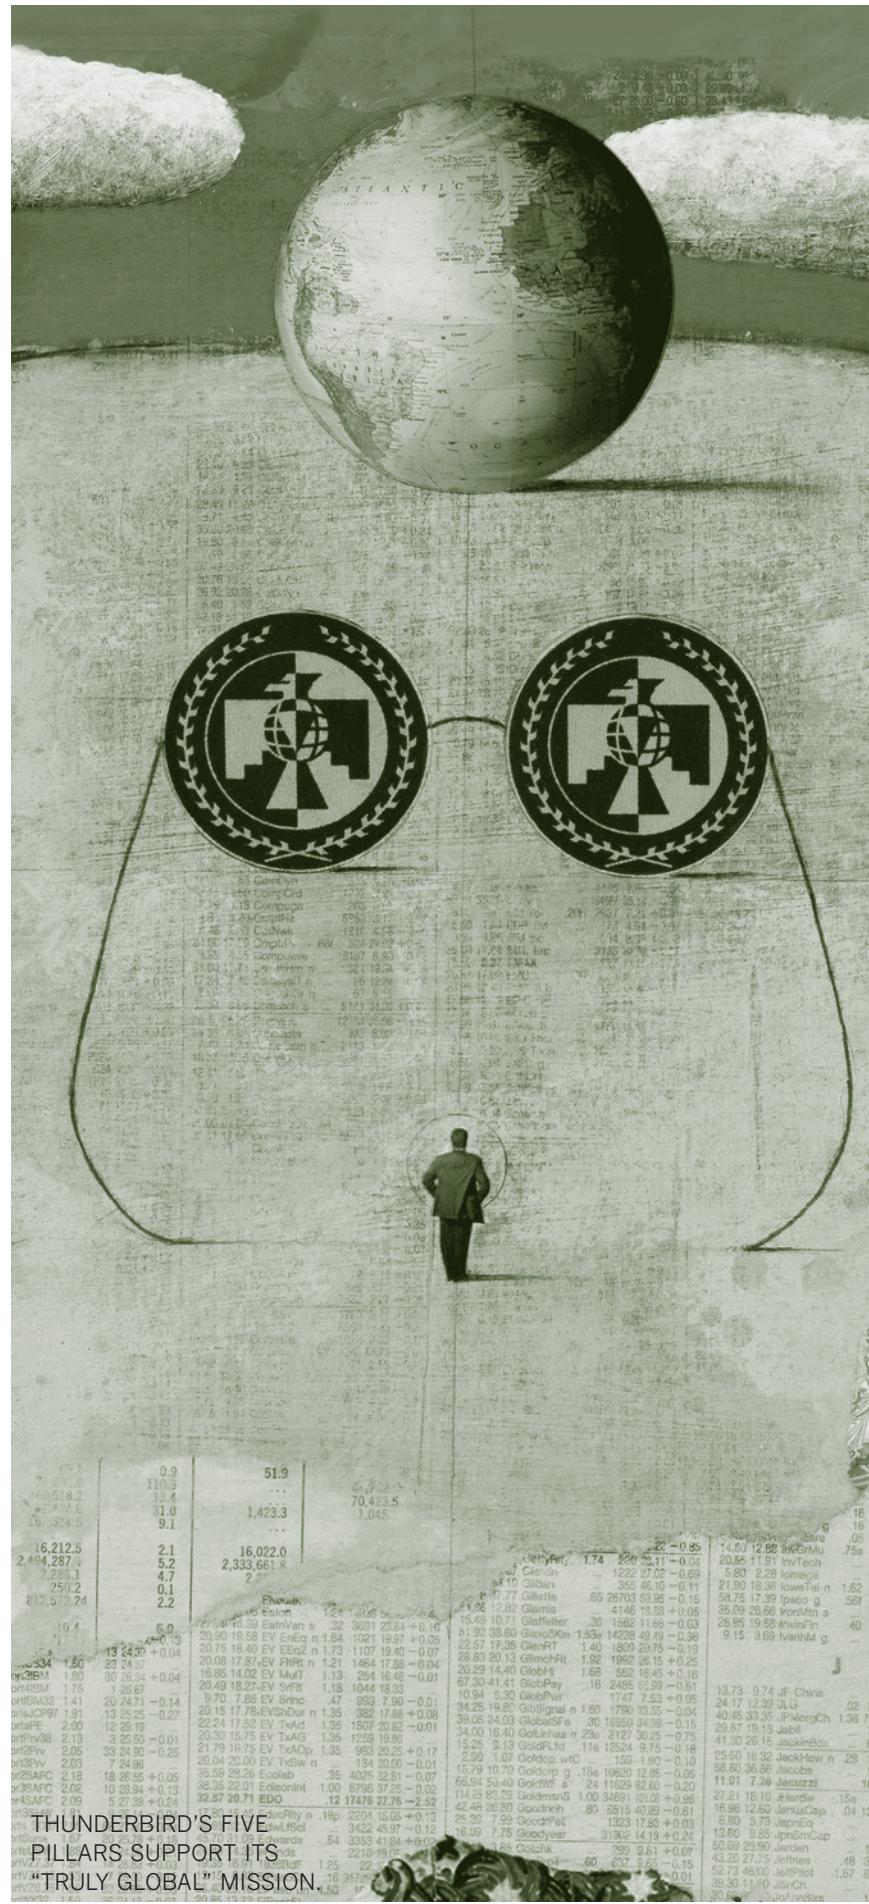

"In the Ethics Center, we want to focus on companies that are taking a proactive role in how they are structuring their activities so they can actually profit from being environmentally sustainable and socially responsible," says Unruh. "Ethics has expanded over the last several decades to include corporate social responsibility — what is the role of the business in society and how should business engage with the community in which it operates — and also issues of the role of business as an environmental force on this planet — its impact on the natural environment, its uses of natural resources."

Integration of these concepts across the curriculum is one of Unruh's first goals — an effort that will help Thunderbird contribute to the education of a new generation of global business leaders who are fully aware of the impact that their decisions can have on society.

The Lincoln Center will ensure that all programs emphasize the idea of global citizenship, and concentrates on individual and professional ethics and company behavior. A main goal of the Center — through class work, seminars and workshops — is to ensure that students are equipped to address the most fundamental dilemmas of business management in an ethical manner.

"We will teach students how to build ethics into the DNA of their companies — something easiest to do when a company is founded," says Unruh, who admits he's in a favorable position, given the high rate of entrepreneurialism of many Thunderbird students and alumni.

"Any alumnus who had a positive experience on campus can further that experience by maintaining a connection to the School and supporting it. I assist with the Winterim on Wall Street program, which I think underscores the fact that support can take other forms besides financial. I also included Thunderbird in my estate, which is just another extension of my personal support."

10 Year Consistent Donors

WI THOUT the generosity of our consistent annual donors, Thunderbird simply would not be Thunderbird. Some individuals have given every year for more than 20 years. As models of stewardship, they set a leading example each year, making top-notch students, world-class professors, cutting-edge facilities and a truly global presence a reality. Thunderbird especially thanks them and recognizes their continued support.

"Our family has seen Thunderbird grow over the years to a truly international school that helps students better prepare themselves for the global world. To continue attracting the best faculty — and to upgrade ourselves even further — Thunderbird needs donations and a proper endowment fund. No school can depend only on tuition income. We would encourage alumni to take the first step forward."

"Citigroup has been one of Thunderbird's top hiring organizations because of the obvious fit between the School's international mind-set and Citigroup's global operations. We have almost 300,000 staff in over 100 countries around the world, and we are continually looking for bright, articulate leaders with a global perspective and an understanding of how to communicate to a diverse, multicultural, multi-geographical organization."

"We recruit and participate in activities at Thunderbird because of the global profile of students and the curriculum at the School. Our business is a global business, and the work performed within the organization crosses many borders. Having future leaders who are comfortable and proficient in that environment is critical to our continued success."

Alumni Giving

By Class

ALUMNI GIVING illustrates to other business schools and the global community the value our shareholders place on the Thunderbird experience. Our alumni contributors advance the School's mission in a new era of global cooperation and understanding. We gratefully acknowledge their financial support and thank them for their generosity and for their part in shaping Thunderbird's future.

"We have tried to be consistent supporters of Thunderbird, giving unrestricted gifts, because we feel that our unique educational experiences have been of enormous value in our careers and lives. We feel a particular fondness for Thunderbird for having played a role in our meeting each other."

"I had a lot of international experience before Thunderbird but no business experience. Thunderbird gave me the "Good Housekeeping Seal of Approval" to pursue a business career. After making Transtec a success, I intended to return the favor, speaking at Winterims, hosting events in Asia and funding a program designed to introduce Thunderbird to the Southeast Asia market."

"For private institutions like Thunderbird, there are only two ways to increase revenues: increase enrollment or increase donations. It is everyone's duty to give donations of time and money. Tuition gives you the privilege of joining the Thunderbird community, but annual donations and service to the community lets you maintain that privilege."

"Through the global lens the EMBA program provided, I have started my journey to becoming a truly global manager. The exposure to culture, ethics, business, and the overarching political economy, provides a platform for students to experience business beyond the borders of their home countries. I contributed a gift to be an example and to honor my commitment of being an active alumnus."

T IS NOT ONLY graduates who love Thunderbird and the ideals the School stands for. Thunderbird is also fortunate to have the strong support of friends, current students, faculty, staff and in-kind donors who believe so passionately in the School's mission that they place a priority on philanthropic support. We appreciate their generosity and recognize their thoughtfulness, loyalty and stewardship.

Volunteer Leadership

THUNDERBIRD'S volunteers are vitally important to the success of the School's programs and services. We thank and acknowledge them for their selfless service on behalf of Thunderbird, their considerable philanthropic support, and their leadership and dedication. Their generosity — both of time and treasure — keeps Thunderbird moving in the right direction during challenging and rewarding times.

"As a member of Thunderbird's Board of Trustees, I find it both a pleasure and a privilege to participate in the School's unique, positive efforts of promoting economic development and global understanding by educating individuals who will provide management leadership to the world's organizations — private, public and NGO. Thunderbird has a special mystique and it provides students and alumni a common heritage that unites them with a network of colleagues in leadership roles around the globe. As a trustee, I am fully committed to supporting Thunderbird and am very proud of its continuing successes."

Thunderbird Global Network Board 2005

THE THUNDERBIRD Global Network consists of more than 140 chapters, three Regional Councils, and a governing Global Network Board. Our newly formed Global Network Board represents a diversity of degrees, class years, geography, professions, nationalities and backgrounds. Their role is to set policy and create services and programs beneficial to Thunderbird alumni. These T-bird alumni not only contribute financially, but also give significant amounts of time and energy to guiding the School's leaders toward sound decisions that benefit all alumni. We thank these outstanding and generous alumni for their important contributions.

"At a basic level, ongoing participation in Thunderbird — whether through time, activity, money or other resources — supports the functioning of the School and the alumni's Thunderbird Global Network. At another level, participation directly broadens exposure to the Thunderbird mystique, enabling more people to embrace positive global interaction through the exchange of ideas and goods."

Chapter Leaders

THUNDERBIRD'S worldwide alumni network includes 140 chapters in 60 countries. Chapter Leaders work closely with local alumni and School administrators to ensure the advancement of Thunderbird. They also promote the importance of giving back, staying engaged, and seeing Thunderbird as a lifelong educational partner. We greatly appreciate and thank them for their commitment and dedication.

TRULY GLOBAL GENEROSITY

A new era in Thunderbird's history has begun, and we are counting on you to help shape it. Please show your T-bird spirit and truly global generosity by making your gift to the Thunderbird Annual Fund.

Your investment will produce a return we can all be proud of.

Give online at www.thunderbird.edu/annualfund or use the gift envelope enclosed with this issue.
